For example: websites visited, programs used, passwords that were used, application performance, and more. It is used in a monitoring mode where it continuously records the information about your computer activity into a log file. Once PC Agent is installed and connected to the Internet, it's ready to start capturing the needed data. In other words, it runs in the background and continuously captures information about what you're doing. When you're using your computer, all the activity is recorded. It's your own personal log file and you can analyze all the records later. PC Agent uses one convenient file called Log.dat to save the captured information. You can view the contents of the log file in the software itself and extract needed information using its built-in search tool. In addition to the full functionality of its original PC Agent application, the new PC Agent Agent Server is also a great tool for capturing and storing information about your web surfing activity online.
